There is a randomness and over-reaction to COVID conditions that permeates this proposal, instead of clear considered thinking. The expansion of outdoor dining isn't intrinsically wrong, but it ignores the needs of the frail, elderly and disabled whose footpaths are already being stolen from them by dining encroachments, and the aggression of law-breaking cyclists who terrorise them on footpaths. The police refuse to do their duty and enforce the laws, while local councils such as the City of Sydney are nothing but mouthpieces for cycling activist groups. We call open the Department to start acting on behalf of the majority, not loud activists - with the State election now appearing on the horizon. We do not forget. Additionally, have State bureaucrats sign a personal indemnity to cover injuries or death suffered by pedestrians whose rights and safety will be erased by this proposal.
