Dear infrastructure Nsw,

I don't understand how a Pyrmont which is limited to low heights can now all of a sudden jump to 35 storeys.

If you look around the world, the best seaside suburbs are not with towers by the water. But allowing the natural environment to be prominent. With small development to enhance.

Not dominant towers to block out the natural environment and not allow others enjoy the view behind.

It's short term thinking and a waste of Australia most beautiful harbour.

Thank you,

Paul
